Foreword

The Fourth World Conference on Women in Beijing in 1995 discussed how to support women’s empowerment and women’s participation in the process of decision-making in all forms of development activities at all levels in order to promote equality as well as to ensure equal benefits in society. The conference resulted in a Declaration and developed a Platform for Action to this end. The Beijing Platform for Action identifies 12 critical areas of concern. These include: the persistent and increasing burden of poverty on women; unequal access to education and training; unequal access to health care and related services; violence against women; the effects of conflict on women, including foreign occupation; inequality in economic structures and policies, in all forms of productive activities and in access to resources; inequality in decision-making at all levels; insufficient mechanisms for advancement of women; human rights of women; access to and participation in all communication systems, especially in the media; inequalities in the management of natural resources and in the safeguarding of the environment; and the rights of the girl child.

Recognizing that the involvement of both women and men is vital to development, developing countries have formulated projects and programs aimed at alleviating poverty and addressing gender gaps. The Cambodian Millennium Development Goals (CMDGs) 2005-2015 were expanded to include elimination of gender inequality in all sectors such as education, economic, public sectors and elimination of violence against women and children.

The Millennium Declaration was adopted at the UN General Assembly in September 2000 by all 189 Member States of the United Nations. The world leaders agreed to a set of time-bound and measurable goals and targets for combating extreme poverty, hunger, disease, illiteracy, environmental degradation and gender inequalities. These goals, which form part of the global development agenda are known as the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs).

The population of the Kingdom of Cambodia is 13.4 million, of which 51.5 percent are females, 48.5 percent males in 2008. Women are quoted as being “the Backbone of the Society and the Economy” and gender equality is identified as a priority in the national strategic development plan.

In alignment with the National Strategic Development Plan, the Cambodia National Council for Women has developed a five-year strategic plan for 2010-2014. This is the road map to guide the CNCW in successful implementation and achievement of its mission. Moreover this strategic plan will be used to monitor and evaluate the progress of implementation and reflection on the achievements. Additionally, the strategic plan clearly outlines the contribution, technical advice and supporting activities of relevant ministries in addressing gender inequality and inequity and all forms of violence against women, towards the achievement of the CMDGs by 2015 along with the implementation of the Rectangular Strategy Phase II of the Royal Government of Cambodia led by Samdech Akka Moha Sena Padei Techno Hun Sen, Prime Minister of the Kingdom of Cambodia.

The Cambodia National Council for Women proudly presents this strategic plan which outlines the crucial role and strategic activities of the Council. The plan was formulated through a participatory and inclusive process and responds to the needs of the community with the overall aim of contributing to social justice and poverty reduction.

Introduction

Peace and stability are historic accomplishments made by the win-win strategy of the Royal Government of Cambodia (RGC) led by Samdech Akka Moha Sena Padei Techo Hun Sen, Prime Minister of the Kingdom of Cambodia. It has considerably contributed to prudent macro-economic management and GDP growth has averaged 10.6 percent per annum in the last three years. This growth reached its record of 13.5 percent, 10.5 percent and 10.1 percent in 2005, 2006 and 2007, respectively.

In the year 2009, the Royal Government of Cambodia committed itself to continue the National Strategic Development Plan and the Rectangular Strategy-Phase 2 which determines the policy priorities of the fourth legislature of the National Assembly in order to reduce poverty, promote socio-economic development, and welfare for the Cambodian people.

In response to these commitments, the Royal Government of Cambodia is working hard for the adoption of laws to protect women. As a result, a series of laws to protect women’s rights and amendments to the Law on Prevention of Domestic Violence and Victims Protection and the Law on Anti-Human Trafficking and Sexual Exploitation were adopted. The Royal Government of Cambodia has established working groups at the national level to fight trafficking and sexual exploitation of women and children to reduce violence against women, which still remains a major concern at all levels of society and around the world.

The Royal Government of Cambodia in the 4th Legislature has clearly recognized that the gender issue cannot be solved separately as it is closely related to poverty reduction, and therefore, development, and it is the key to improve the wellbeing of women and their families.

In order to have a clearer direction for the effective implementation of its strategy, the CNCW has prepared a five-year strategic plan to cover the period from 2010 to 2014. This strategic plan is the result of a participatory process involving leaders, members of CNCW and Inter-Ministerial Working Groups on Gender as well as the Permanent General Secretariat of the CNCW. The purpose of this strategic plan is to prepare a clear plan including the vision, mission, goal and objectives, problems analysis, identification of priority activities and resources needed towards its successful implementation.

In its strategic plan the CNCW has provided strategic sectors to re-enforce the national and international laws and other related regulations, rules and recommendations provided by the Samdech Akka Moha Sena Padei Techo Hun Sen, Prime Minister of the Kingdom of Cambodia to promote the status and roles of women and the social welfare of Cambodian women.

This strategic plan showed the best efforts of CNCW and the commitment to achieve the goal set in the strategic plan.
PART ONE
The Royal Government of Cambodia Policy Platform on Promoting Status and Women’s Rights

1.1. Constitution of the Kingdom of Cambodia

The Constitution of the Kingdom of Cambodia in 1993, stipulates in Article 31 that “The Kingdom of Cambodia recognizes and respects human rights as determined in the Universal Declaration on Human Rights, the Conventions and Covenants on human rights. Cambodian citizens of either sex have equal rights before the law, the same freedom and obligation regardless of race, color, sex, language, belief, religion, political tendency, ethnic, social status, or other situation. Freedom and personal rights of each individual shall not interfere with others people’s rights. The exercise of this freedom shall be regulated.”

In relation to the participation of women and men in other spheres of life, Art. 35 states that “Cambodian citizens of either sex have the right to engage actively in political, economic, social and cultural spheres of the nation.”

1.2. Rectangular Strategy-Phase 2

The Royal Government of Cambodia (RGC) ratifies the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW) in 1992 without reservation. CEDAW ensures civil rights and legal status of women as follows:

- their political participation
- non-discrimination in education, employment and in the economic and social activities
- the equal rights and obligations of women and men with regards to the choice of spouse, parenthood, individual rights and economic rights.

The Royal Government of Cambodia continues to be committed in promoting gender equity to achieve poverty reduction and sustainable development by paying special attention on its impact on women and children and seek solutions as well as strategic intervention for policies development. The Royal Government of Cambodia has been implementing policies on women’s capacity building by increasing opportunities for female students through providing scholarship, training programs at the educational institutions, providing appropriate dormitories and ensuring female students’ safety as well as increasing the number of female teachers, and enhancing the roles of women in decision making and the roles of women in the national and sub-national levels. The Royal Government of Cambodia has continued to promote the roles and status of women in decision making and taking into account of training at all levels.

Moreover, to stop Violence and Women Trafficking, the Royal Government of Cambodia will implement the law on Prevention of Domestic Violence and Victims Protection to protect women’s rights legally, effectively and timely to the victims who are mostly women and children in cooperation with the concerned institutions and development partners.

1.3. Cambodia Millennium Development Goals

The Royal Government of Cambodia (RGC) signed the Millennium Declaration and committed itself to the achievement of the MDGs. The RGC intends to measure the national development performance against the CMDGs and prepare regular CMDGs progress reports.

Cambodia has made some progress towards the achievement of the MDGs but more efforts will be needed over the next decade. Since 1999, Cambodia has made significant progress in implementing a macroeconomic framework aimed at achieving long-term economic growth and sustainable development. Cambodia has also made impressive progress in strengthening political and economic stability. Sound economic management, macro-economic stability and sustainable economic growth are required for sustainable poverty reduction and for Cambodia to achieve its CMDGs.

CMDG3 aims at eliminating gender disparities in socio-economic and political.

1.4. Challenges in Promoting Status and Women’s Rights

There are different forms of inequality in Cambodia such as inequality in social, economical, and political spheres. Inequality is remarkably different between rural and urban communities, particularly in Phnom Penh, capital of Cambodia. Generally, the employment and income generating opportunities in the urban area is higher than in the rural area. Inequality is noticeable in rural area particularly in ethnic communities. The progression made over a decade requires increasing the investment of necessary financial and human resources in these areas where development is slower.

Gender equality remains a major issue in most areas of socio-economic life despite the government’s clear commitment to female empowerment.

Gender disparities are remarkable in social affairs. Although, access to primary education has been improved significantly over the last decade, Cambodia has not succeeded in achieving its target to increase access to secondary school.

Despite, the clear commitment of RGC to empower women; gender equity remains a major issue in certain sectors of social affairs, and economy. It is too early to evaluate whether the target has been achieved or not. On the other hand, gender issues have been mainstreamed in the political agenda changing mindsets, behaviors and attitudes to achieve the 2015 target. Despite all the progress challenges remain significant.

Violence against women (such as Gender Based Violence (GBV), rape and child abuse) still exists in Cambodia. The GBV is unaccepted and not tolerant in the Cambodia society. GBV victims, are usually, discriminated rather than provided with alternative support and compensation. Moreover, the intervention to prevent violence in society is still limited.

Violence, exploitation, and discrimination against women and children represent a big challenge for Cambodian society, a violation of the National Constitution which recognizes human rights, and a major cause that blocks women’s participation in development process. These can negatively impact families, the community, and the whole society in terms of economy, safety, and welfare.

The capacity of government officers in all levels is limited in gender analysis and the advocacy work remains limited. Another important challenge is gender mainstreaming into strategic programs.

Even though some laws have been adopted, the implementation and enforcement are still problematic.

PART THREE
Preparation Process of Strategic Plan

The preparation process of a five-year strategic plan (2010 – 2014) of the Cambodian National Council for Women (CNCW) has been done on a participatory basis to provide inputs and constructive comments in accordance with the Cambodian context. For the development of this strategic plan, two consultative workshops were organized with the Inter-Ministerial Working Groups on Gender from line Ministries and concerned stakeholders, including civil society organizations, to gather information and to analyze the current situation of women and women’s rights at the national and sub national levels. This process is very important to remark the crucial roles of CNCW in providing overall supervision and guidance to prepare this strategic plan.

After the consultation with the Inter-ministerial Working Groups on Gender and the concerned stakeholders, there have been several follow up meetings conducted within the Permanent General Secretariat of CNCW to review the draft plan to make the necessary modifications.

Once the Permanent General Secretariat of CNCW reviewed the modifications, this strategic plan was submitted to all CNCW members and an ordinary meeting was organized on the 1st of October 2009 to get final comments/feedbacks and approval for its implementation.

4.6. Duration of strategic plan
This strategic plan is designed for a 5-year period from 1 January 2010 to 31 December 2014.
PART FIVE
Monitoring and Evaluation the Progresses of CNCW

Measuring progress of CNCW requires a clear monitoring and evaluation system. Monitoring aims at:

- Rapidly detecting any significant deviation from expected targets regarding inputs, activities and outputs related to all objectives towards the achievements of each year; and

- Assessing trends of CNCW’s outcome indicators. Hence, monitoring includes periodic recording of gap measurement and reporting with basic analysis and maintaining the key indicators. The data required for such monitoring activities include information on inputs used, activities conducted and outputs achieved (secondary data coming from Inter-Ministries) as well as data required to calculate outcome and impact indicators coming from routine administrative sources and from surveys.

Monitoring and evaluation system was based on the regular field visit of CNCW to collect data and to examine the outputs and the outcomes from the implementation of this strategic plan. The data collection was based on the logical framework and annual workplan.

Monitoring activities and inputs are outputs monitoring and from the logical framework was used to prepare the annual work plan and then prepare semester and quarterly plans. The activities have to link to the indicators presented in the logical framework.

This plan is prepared by the Officials of CNCW and the Inter-Ministerial Working Groups on Gender and sent to all concerned Ministries and Institutions.

Mid-term review of the implementation of this strategic plan will be conducted in the second or third year to examine or modify the plan to meet the current situation and changing situation of the country and set goals for continuous implementation.

At the end of the implementation of this strategic plan, the annual meeting of the implementation of the strategic plan through meetings between all implementers, concerned development partners, and civil society to sum up the results which are implemented compared to the strategic plan.
